Piano-Forte Recital.

The graduating series of recitals by the senior class, Central College, was inaugurated Friday evening by Jessie Marie Wayland, pianiste. A large audience of Lexington and College folk was present to hear a pretentious program admirably done. And the absolute attention from first to last of every one present refutes the assertion that people don't like classical music. It all depends: No one cares for classical music mutilated; but classical music perfectly executed and properly interpreted is as clear as the sunlight, and can not fail to be enjoyable for those who have ears to hear.

Without specialization the Scarlatti selections were charming examples of the old Italian School. And the Hummel Concerto was as exquisitely ornate as a vocal aria in bel canto. Chopin's Cradle Song is the best of its kind in all Piano literature, and was given with real artistry by Miss Wayland.

With exceptional technical and musical equipment Miss Wayland sustained the high standards of the Conservatory in the entire program which follows:
